TULIP CULTURE

PLANTING

TIME—Late October or early November is the best—by putting a handful of sand under each bulb you can plant as late as Christmas.

PLACE—Tulips can stand full sun, but will last longer in half shade — preferably, morning sun and afternoon shade.

MANURE—Unless tulips have been in the same ground for several years, we do not advise the use of manure or fertilizer. If you must use fertilizer, use an equal mixture of bone and bloodmeal, working it in below the bulb.

DEPTH AND SPACE—With interplanting 12 inches apart, otherwise six inches. Space bulbs on top of the ground first, and then plant four to five inches deep—all at equal depth. If soil is very stiff, loosen with peat or coarse sand.

CARE OF BULBS

WATERING—Give bulbs good soaking right after planting. It is of great importance that you water the bulbs every week until the rains start.

CULTIVATION—When tulip sprouts are an inch above the ground, loosen soil around them, and keep that soil loose. Keep bulbs well watered; only, stagnant water will rot a bulb. Tulips blooming very close to the ground show lack of water.

REMOVING AFTER BLOOMING—If convenient, leave bulbs in the ground for at least two years. Remove foliage when you can do so by twisting it off. When moving, take all the foliage and considerable dirt and trench in a shady place to heal. Store bulbs in a cool place.

DARWIN TULIPS are the tall self colored tulips, predominating in the reds, whites and pinks. BREEDERS, which always have a yellow center, come in the darker shades. COTTAGE TULIPS have pointed petals, some of the best yellows are in this class. LILY FLOWERED TULIPS open in the day time like lilies, and close at night.
